

What is claimed is:

1. A spectacle strap-on apparatus comprising:

a pair of spectacles having two lenses, a pair of nose pads and a nose stand fixed between the two lenses and being able to be disassembled and assembled, a seat fastened at an outer side of each lens, and an ear rack pivotally joined at an end of each seat; wherein, the nose stand has auxiliary stands that are located between the two nose pads and the nose stand, a position of each auxiliary stand near the nose stand is provided with a fastening ring, and each ring is inlaid with a magnet at a center portion thereof; and at least a pair of strap-on sunglasses having a pair of lenses connected by a nose stand in between; wherein, the nose stand has two fastening rings each having a magnet inlaid at a center portion thereof; and the characteristics thereof being that, the nose stand of the strap-on sunglasses is clasped at the nose stand of the spectacles, such that the two magnets at the nose stand of the sunglasses precisely come into contact with the magnets at the nose pad auxiliary stands of the spectacles to closely adhere the strap-on sunglasses to the spectacles.